Editorial Page

Room of Civil Society Development (RCSD) is a community service-oriented journal that covers the development and application of Science and Technology as a result of community service activities in the form, model, concept, and/or implementation of community service as an effort to increase community participation in development and community empowerment.

This journal is managed by Lembaga Riset dan Inovasi Masyarakat Madani after being peer-reviewed by peers in their disciplines, which include, but are not limited to, community service outcomes in the social sciences-humanities and precise sciences. The journal's subjects are the results of community service in the domains of education, information technology, law, economics, humanities, engineering, agriculture, communication, health, engineering, and other fields. This publication, being a scientific periodical, employs peer-reviewers from several approved public and private colleges.
